HDFC Bank shares down 7.4% in 2 days after chairman's exit

SUBRATA PANDA
Mumbai, 20 March

After a tumultuous day, where HDFC Bank's management and board tried to calm investor sentiment, following Atanu Chakraborty's abrupt exit from the bank, the stock again took a hit on Friday. It fell 2.41 per cent, underperforming the broader market, which rose 0.44 per cent. Shares of the bank closed at ₹780.45 on the BSE.

In the last two days, the bank's shares have tumbled close to 7.5 per cent, wiping out nearly ₹1 trillion in market capitalisation (mcap).

Late on Wednesday, the bank informed the exchanges that Chakraborty had resigned as part-time chairman, saying some of the practices in the bank were not in congruence with his values and ethics.

Following that, Keki Mistry was appointed interim part-time chairman of the bank with Reserve Bank of India (RBI) approval. Mistry, on Thursday, tried to assuage investor concerns and reiterated that there are no material matters at this point in time, with respect to the bank.

"The bank operates with strong governance standards, robust internal controls and an extremely experienced management team. Our strategic direction, business priorities and execution capabilities continue to remain as always," he said.

"I would not have taken on this responsibility at the age of 71 if it did not align with my principles and my level of integrity that I would expect from the bank," Mistry emphasised on a call with analysts and press on Thursday. According to a Motilal Oswal note, the development (with HDFC Bank) has dampened investor sentiment and comes at a time when the markets are already grappling with a lot of macro-uncertainty.

However, assurances from the management, Mistry's appointment as interim chairman, and RBI's endorsement of the bank's corporate governance and compliance standards have helped assuage some concerns. "Going ahead, we believe appointment of the new chairman and the submission of Shashidhar Jagdishan's name for the next chief executive officer (CEO) term (term due in October 2026) will help restore investor trust," the report said. It added that the improved operating performance in the coming year will be critical to stock performance.

"There is a period of uncertainty till we get RBI approval for the CEO which is coming up for renewal in October 2026," said Suresh Ganapathy, managing director (MD), head of Financial Services Research, Macquarie Capital, in a note on Friday. In a report on Thursday, Ganapathy had stated that Macquarie had removed HDFC Bank from its "marquee" buy list.

"Near-term underperformance may remain, while fundamentals are strong with good return on assets (ROA). At this point in time, governance concerns will weigh down heavily on the stock. Investors would want more comfort from the board. Also, now the uncertainty surrounding Sashi's reappointment will weigh down on the stock," he said in his report.

Ganapathy added that key risks include slowdown in growth and further governance issues.

"Though the management and the board assured of no governance, operational, regulatory or power struggles, we believe the bank must curb management exits and rebuild leadership strength either internally or externally. It should also swiftly clarify on the current MD and CEO's term extension beyond October 2026 or place a succession plan to reduce management uncertainty," Emkay said in a note.

Governance uncertainty and leadership visibility gap are likely to keep the stock under pressure in the near term, said Nomura in a report.

GSECS BECOMING POPULAR

Match investment horizon with tenor to avoid interest-rate risk

HIMALI PATEL

The war, rising yields, equity market volatility, and growing familiarity with the Reserve Bank of India's Retail Direct platform (launched in November 2021) have triggered a movement towards the safety of government securities (Gsecs). Trading activity on the platform rose from ₹1,756.08 crore a year earlier to ₹8,211.91 crore on March 16, 2026.

Growing popularity

Ease of access has been a major catalyst. "The RBI Retail Direct platform has improved accessibility and transparency for individual investors," says Harit Oberoi, head-fixed income, wealth management, Motilal Oswal Financial Services.

Gsecs provide the advantage of low credit risk. "They offer government-backed safety and are among the most reliable instruments from a credit perspective," says Saurabh Jain, cofounder and chief executive officer (CEO), Stable Money.

Current yield levels have made sovereign instruments attractive. The 6.48GS 2035 is currently offering a yield of 6.74 per cent. State Bank of India pays 6.05 per cent while HDFC Bank pays 6.15 per cent on the 10-year fixed deposit. "At current yields, Gsecs are competitive enough to deliver meaningful income for investors prioritising capital protection," says Jain.

Regular (six-monthly) coupon payments provide visibility of cash flows. "Volatility in equity markets has pushed investors towards safer, predictable-return avenues," says Oberoi.

Beware interest-rate risk

Interest-rate risk remains a key concern in Gsecs. "When yields rise, bond prices fall, and that can create mark-to-market losses if the investor exits before maturity," says Saurabh Ghosh, cofounder, Jiraaf.

Investors could also be susceptible to reinvestment risk. "Coupon inflows may have to be redeployed at lower yields in a declining rate environment," says Jain.

Liquidity has improved but remains uneven across maturities. "For retail investors, this can translate into less efficient pricing or limited exit flexibility in certain cases," says Jain.

Taxation of Gsecs

Coupon income is taxed at the investor's applicable income tax slab rate. No capital gain arises if the security is held until maturity, as the principal is repaid at face value. If sold before maturity, gains after 12 months are taxed as long-term capital gains at 12.5 per cent without indexation. Gains within 12 months are taxed at the applicable income tax slab. Taxation can materially change the post-tax attractiveness of a Gsec. "This is especially true for investors in higher tax brackets," says Ghosh.

How to select a Gsec

Yield to maturity is a key metric. Investors should also assess the interest-rate outlook and account for duration risk. "Longer papers have greater price sensitivity to rate movements," says Nikhil Aggarwal, founder and group CEO, Grip Invest. Cash-flow needs

Lock-in yields if you have the investment horizon

Instrument	Yield to maturity (%)
6.01 GS 2030	6.43
6.48 GS 2035	6.74
6.68 GS 2040	7.13
7.30 GS 2053	7.51
7.24 GS 2055	7.52

should be another criterion. "Investors should match future cash-flow needs with Gsecs, which come in various maturities," says Vishal Goenka, cofounder, Indiabonds.com. Oberoi adds that aligning a bond's maturity with the investor's holding period can help avoid mark-to-market volatility.

Shorter-tenor securities are better suited for near-term needs. "Longer-tenor Gsecs are more appropriate for investors who understand interest-rate risk and can stay invested through interim price volatility," says Ghosh.

A laddered approach can reduce concentration risk. "Laddering can help investors enjoy periodic liquidity," says Aggarwal. It can also reduce reinvestment risk by averaging out the yield at which investors deploy money.

"The 5-10 year range offers a reasonable balance for most retail investors," says Aggarwal.

Alternatives to consider

Investors willing to take slightly higher risk may consider investment-grade corporate bonds. "These typically offer a yield premium of 100-200 basis points over comparable Gsecs," says Aggarwal.

Corporate bonds carry higher credit risk than sovereign paper. "But for well-rated issuers, the risk-reward in corporate bonds can be attractive for investors who can hold to maturity," says Aggarwal.

Goenka is of the view that RBI floating-rate bonds come with a lock-in and hence are less preferable than Gsecs. He suggests that first-time investors should stick to a buy-and-hold strategy.

₹1,000 monthly EPS pension 'inadequate': What subscribers should do

A parliamentary panel recently called the ₹1,000 minimum pension under the Employees' Pension Scheme (EPS) inadequate, highlighting a significant retirement gap for millions of pension fund members. EPS is part of the broader Employees' Provident Fund Organisation. EPFO builds a retirement corpus and EPS provides a fixed monthly pension. The Parliamentary Standing Committee on Labour said the ₹1,000 EPS pension "does not meet even basic needs" amid inflation and health care costs.

What it means for EPF subscribers

EPF may not be sufficient: The pension is small and capped, regardless of your salary growth. Dependence on EPF corpus increases: Your lump-sum savings become more crucial. Need for additional planning: Relying solely on EPF and EPS may leave a retirement gap.

Given the uncertainty around EPF revisions, subscribers should:

Build parallel retirement savings: Use instruments like National Pension System, mutual funds, or Public Provident Fund. Track your EPS eligibility: Understand service years and pensionable salary limits. Don't entirely rely on fixed pensions: Inflation can erode real value over time.
